Doherty proposes 10 pm bar closing

By John Knitta
and Dean Weaver
Staff Reporters

Carbondale city manager Jeff Doherty submitted a proposal to the city council Tuesday night that would prohibit the sale of alcohol in Carbondale after 10 p.m. during Halloween weekend.

Doherty said previous attempts to

Halloween restrictions needed—city manager curb partying on Halloween weekend have been unsuccessful.

"There is nothing attractive or desirable about the type of activities that occurred in the middle of South Illinois Avenue last Halloween," Doherty said.

He said there continued to be several hours of fights and arrests for public consumption and possession of alcohol, public urination and reckless conduct. There were 148 arrests but 87 individuals who were arrested were not from Carbondale.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the influx of other people from outside of Carbondale were the main source of the problem. "Other students bring their illegal behavior to us and reflect ill on the SIU student body," he said. "They come here to do things they can't do anywhere else."

Doherty's proposal would halt alcohol sales of all kinds from Oct. 27 to Oct. 29 after 10 p.m. The proposal would also prohibit the sale or transportation of alcohol in containers over two gallons during the weekend.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said she wants to stop the drunkenness on Halloween but foresees problems with Doherty's proposal.

"I'm not sure prohibition has ever worked," she said.

The issue will be open to public discussion Oct. 4 when the proposals are on the council agenda.

GPSC to vote on counselors for grievances

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will meet tonight to vote on a resolution that could provide graduate students who file grievances against the University with trained advisors.

The resolution, which appeared for discussion before the council at their meeting Aug. 31, calls for a trained "advocate" to be made available by GPSC for all graduate students who want to file an official complaint against professors or other faculty members.

Susan Hall, former GPSC president, said most graduate students file grievances against professors when they have been accused of plagiarism and want to dispute the accusation.

Hall, who has served on two grievance boards at the University, said the grievance system at SIUC is a necessary system to protect students' rights but said many students need an advisor because the process is complicated.

"I think it (the grievance system) is a great idea," Hall said. "But there is a lot of bureaucracy — deadlines and red tape that goes along with appealing anything. Students should have someone on their side to give them advice."

Jason Matthews, GPSC vice president for administrative affairs, said the resolution calls for training of graduate

Proposal for incinerator under fire

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

Representatives for seven local environmental groups, including SIUC's own Student Environmental Center, called for a halt of the Crab Orchard hazardous waste incinerator project at a press conference Tuesday.

The conference was in reaction to a newly released study by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which focused on dioxin, the most harmful known chemical group released by incinerators.

The study, a reassessment of dioxin effects, involved the EPA, other federal agencies, and members of the general scientific community.

Findings included the discovery that the dioxin level needed to

WASHINGTON—The Environmental Protection Agency's long-awaited dioxin study has prompted a fierce dispute between environmentalists and the chemical industry, while also raising a difficult question for policy-makers: What should be done to protect humans".

Rose Rowell, representative for the Southern Coalition on Protecting the Environment, said the new study re-affirmed that dioxins cause many problems for the human immune system.

"The research reveals dioxins can act as hormones, disrupting the development of sex characteristics," said Rowell. "The damage can be passed down from parents to children, which threatens future generations."

"The EPA may play with the wording in this study, so as not to alarm the public, but they cannot change the scientific fact that even the least bit of dioxin is harmful to humans."

Richard Whitney, representing the SIU chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild, said the EPA and Crab Orchard Wildlife refuge were engaged in sheer folly with the incinerator project.

SEPARATIST PARTY WINS QUEBEC ELECTIONS — QUEBEC — Quebec voters Monday elected a separatist party to govern the province, launching Canada into what promises to be a debilitating year-long struggle over national unity. The Parti Quebecois, led by Jacques Parizeau, won 77 seats in the 125-member National Assembly, as the provincial parliament is called. The Liberals took 47 seats, and one went to a splinter party. The popular vote was much closer, however, with near-complete returns showing the Parti Quebecois edging out the Liberals by only 4 percent and failing to win a majority of the votes cast.

CUBAN REFUGEES POURING INTO U.S. WATERS — ABOARD THE CHANDELEUR in the Florida Straits — In recent days, hundreds of Cubans anxious to beat Havana's deadline of Tuesday for illicit departures have headed for the treacherous waters of the Florida Straits in a frenzied last-ditch effort to leave their beleaguered island. They left even though most knew that they would be taken to the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay on Cuba's southeastern shore and would have little chance of reaching the United States. The weekend volume did not match last month's record levels but did produce a sudden surge in the numbers of those rescued.

SURVEY EXAMINES BIRTH RATE AMONG TEENS — A new study by Columbia University researchers has found that girls who became mothers before their 16th birthday and those who married either before or after the baby was born were more likely to have a second child within 24 months of the first. Poor women were more likely to have a rapid second birth. According to the National Longitudinal Survey of Youth, a federally funded survey of nearly 12,000 teenagers and young adults, one in four teenage mothers has a second baby within two years of the first.

GROWTH HORMONE INEFFECTIVE, STUDY SAYS — In the first test of what happens when short healthy children are given human growth hormone until the end of puberty, researchers have found that the drug has little or no effect on final height. The findings are the latest setback for the hormone's U.S. makers — Genentech and Eli Lilly — which have tried to expand the drug's lucrative market. Last month, a federal grand jury indicted a Genentech vice president and three officials from Genentech's growth-hormone distributor on charges involving illegal kickbacks on hormone sales.

LAWYERS' CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS HIGH — WASHINGTON — A single Texas trial lawyer contributed $580,000 to candidates for state offices during the past four years — placing him atop a group of 1,550 trial lawyers who have lavished $17.3 million on candidates in three states, according to an organization pressing for major changes in the nation's tort system. The American Tort Reform Association (ATRA), in a study to be released Wednesday, said that plaintiffs' trial lawyers in Alabama, California and Texas brought "massive amounts of money" to bear in their battle before state legislatures and courts to prevent limits on punitive damages and other changes in trial procedures.

SIUC steam plant renovations OK'd

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

Part of the budget approved by the SIUC Board of Trustees for fiscal year 1995 will help lessen hazardous gas emissions from the SIUC steam plant, according to a University News press release.

The board approved $5 million to be spent on renovating the coal-burning power plant, which is located in the University Physical Plant, to reduce pollutants that the steam releases into the atmosphere.

According to University officials, the renovations include implementing filter "bags" onto the smoke stack that will screen out ash particles that would otherwise blow out the stack.

Limestone will also be added to the coal mixture to trap hazardous sulfur gasses from being released into the air. Sulfur gas emitted from coal burning is a common pollutant that can cause acid rain.

Aside from preventing some of the excessive pollutants and ash from drifting into the atmosphere, the plant also provides the University with much of its electrical power that is created from harnessing the energy from burning coal, campus officials said.

SIUC President John Guyon told the board at their Sept. 8 meeting that the plant is a key energy resource for the University.

Allen A. Haake, SIUC supervising architect, said the power plant is actually a continuing project which began in 1990 and has continued to be improved upon.

Haake said most of the project is still in the design phase and is scheduled for completion in early 1996. The power plant is expected to cost around $34 million upon completion.

In other action, the board granted a utility company permanent access to a narrow stretch of land along Lincoln Drive and Rowden Road, southwest of main campus. Central Illinois Public Service Co. will maintain about 1.5 miles of natural gas pipeline in this area to serve fraternity and sorority houses and University Farms operations.

International students enjoy American college life

By Katie Morrissey
Staff Writer

International students come to America with the same expectations for their college experience as students from the United States — an upcoming event is designed to help them meet such expectations.

Saturday's first SIUC International Olympics is one example of opportunities both international and American students have to get to know each other.

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, International student council president, said international students who step out and make themselves known within the first weeks of school enjoy their American experience more than those who shrink away from opportunities to meet new people.

The council is hoping to provide international students a chance to branch out and allow Americans to meet them. Wan Napi, graduate student in public administration, said he is hoping to see many American and international students show up for this year's International Olympics.

"This is for Americans and internationals, guys and girls, and we usually see a fair amount of each at these events," Wan Napi said.

Michael Correa, an international student from India, said he encourages his friends from India to break away from the books occasionally to meet with Americans and other internationals.

"They think because they are graduate students they should only be with their books, but that is not true," Correa said.

Correa, graduate student in business, said international students from India often have the advantage of speaking the English language but cultural differences still separate them.

He said he thinks the event will help draw out some SIUC students from India.

Correa said international students

SIUC officials cancel debit card program

DUE TO OPPOSITION FROM CARBONDALE businesses, the SIUC debit card has been canceled. The debit card program offered student a security-oriented way of purchasing goods and having funds directly transferred from an established account. But not anymore.

Supporters of the program wanted the debit card to be citywide, including the University Mall. But before it could go off campus, the card was used in the Student Center. As part of the program, students could have used the card inside the Student Center, for snack bars and student dining halls as well as the Parking Division and the Student Health Programs clinic.

Students were able to set up an account along with their student identification card at the Student Center ID Card Office. To open an account, students had to put a $25 minimum deposit down. Additional funds could have been added at any time and no minimum balance was required after opening the account.

But officials argue that the debit card program, known as Saluki Express, took away from local businesses and it was not the place of the University to do so because of the tax dollars that SIUC receives. For example, if a student had more money in the debit card account and wanted to buy books, that student probably would have chosen the University Bookstore in the Student Center rather than 710 Bookstore which is off-campus and did not accept the card.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS CLAIM THE DEBIT card program alternatives are being looked into, but nothing is concrete. But something is clear: The debit card program died because of the strong opposition against it from Carbondale businesses, including banks, and the lack of student support for it.

The program had received a lot of interest from both parents and students, but not enough to keep the service from being canceled, according to officials. Funds put into accounts by students who used the card were refunded and returned. In the past, the debit card was pushed by the Undergraduate Student Government which finally succeeded in gaining SIUC President John C. Guyon's approval for the card after three years of trying to set up such a system. The card became the perfect way to purchase services and goods without carrying cash.

As long as students had enough funds in their accounts and at a business where it could be used, the card was an example of convenience and security. Compared to high-interest on credit cards and surcharges on written checks, the card was a good deal. Limited business accessibility and direct transaction of funds instead of a credit card and check's grace period, were the only disadvantages of the card.

For now, students are without a debit card program. As for the future of the program alternatives, students should demand that such a service be implemented and it should be accessible citywide.

Ex-president critical of SIU system

In his July 21st story, Marc Chase reported that an unnamed SIU System official gave the current annual cost of operating the System as $852,000. A slight error. The actual amount is $1,800,000—and this does not include rather substantial System expenses thoughtfully hidden in the budget of the two campuses.

Some $2 million for a chancellor and a gaggle of associate, and assistant-to, chancellors... to "coordinate" two presidents? The best justification that the Trustees can offer for this bizarre and costly arrangement is that, well, the University of Illinois System also has only two campuses.

But, almost needless to say, the U of I and SIU are hardly comparable. Measured by budget alone, the U of I ($1.5 billion) is four times the size of SIU and immeasurably more complex. Obviously—though not to our trustees—the organizational needs of the two universities have little in common.

Sadly enough, there was once the hope that SIU might become, if not the equal of U of I, at least the "second jewel in the crown." That possibility, it is now clear, died in the early 1970's with the appointment of the Trustees who have since controlled the Board.

As individuals, these Trustees no doubt have redeeming, conceivably even admirable, qualities. But, as a Board they have been a collective catastrophe, for the creation of the "SIU System" is only one in a series of disastrous decisions. Looking at their dismal record over the past two decades, there inevitably comes to mind Oliver Cromwell's edict to the Rump Parliament—"It is not fit that you sit here any longer!... you shall now give place to better men."

—Albert Somit, former SIUC president, 1980-87

Commentary

U.S. sanctions could disrupt trade

Los Angeles Times

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor, meeting in Los Angeles last weekend with counterparts from America's three biggest trading partners, must feel anything but at ease.

The Clinton administration is considering unilateral trade action in knowing violation of the agreements and principles that the ministers are meeting to enhance. That issue hangs like a foreboding cloud over the discussions.

The administration says it will meet its self-imposed deadline of Sept. 30 to decide whether to threaten trade sanctions against Japan. If reports are true, the action would be taken against Japanese auto parts manufacturers.

This should make tensions particularly high, since no unfair trade practice in auto parts has been identified. In fact, there have been repeated private admissions by U.S. government officials that the auto parts "problem" is largely political, not substantive.

The United States would be taking the action simply because it doesn't like the balance of trade between the two countries, and in spite of the failure of repeated, exhaustive attempts to document charges of unfair trade practices in autos and auto parts. A U.S. decision to act without evidence of wrongdoing would abandon 50 years of global-trade consensus and fly in the face of America's longstanding support for free trade in competitive world markets.

Should the United States decide on Sept. 30 to move toward sanctions, Japan's auto makers will urge their country to "take whatever actions are appropriate" in response. We may be on the brink of a trade confrontation the likes of which we haven't seen since before the Depression. To solve a "problem" that doesn't exist, millions of American jobs would be put at risk.

The shock of an international disruption of trade would register as a new and economically disastrous kind of earthquake in a state still struggling to recover from the last recession. The irony is that so much has already been accomplished to increase U.S. sales to Japan in both autos and auto parts.

Largely as the result of an intensive and sustained industry-to-industry, company-to-company effort, Japanese purchases of U.S. auto parts have jumped more than 500 percent since 1986—from $2.49 billion to $15.5 billion. In just the last five years, the number of U.S. suppliers to Japanese auto makers has grown more than fourfold, from about 300 to about 1,250.

U.S. auto makers are watching their sales in Japan soar since the recent introduction of basic marketing techniques like price cuts and the offering of cars equipped with right-hand drive. All this progress, and that potentially yet to come, would be blown away by the trade conflagration Kantor and his boss may be about to provoke.

"It is ironic that the EPA has released a study showing dioxins as a clear and present danger to human and environmental health—and that same EPA is still planning to go ahead with a plan to result in the creation and dispersal of more dioxin into our environment," Whitney said.

Christine Smith, a freshman in pre-pharmacy at John A. Logan College, said she was concerned about what she heard at the conference.

The study illustrates how dioxin—a term used to describe a class of chlorinated hydrocarbons produced largely as a byproduct of combustion of waste and some industrial processes—works its way into commonly consumed foods. Lodging in fatty tissues, tiny amounts of dioxin are found in beef, fish, milk and cheese, among other foods, the study said. Mothers can also pass it on to infants through breast feeding.

For environmentalists, the conclusions make a strong case for government action. "The evidence is too strong to ignore," Barbara Dudley, director of Greenpeace, said Tuesday at a joint news conference with other leading environmental groups. "What we're asking for is government and industry to take action now."

Some industry spokesmen disagreed. "After reviewing the study, I have to ask why the public really has to be concerned about it?" said Jay Murray, a toxicologist speaking on behalf of the Chemical Manufacturer's Association. "While I agree that we are all exposed to dioxin, I don't think the general public faces any particular risk."

One reason industry executives downplay the risk is that dioxin is released in very small quantities. Throughout the United States, only 30 pounds of dioxins and related compounds called furans are emitted annually, according to the EPA. At that level of emission, you clearly have to question how much risk there can be, a chemical industry spokesman said.

But EPA officials acknowledge that new regulations may be in order. Already, federal bans on the use of lead in gasoline and the composition of herbicides have helped reduce exposure in Americans, according to dioxin specialists.

"I live 45 minutes away, but I come to school here every day," said Smith. "It bothers me that these chemicals will be in the air I have to breathe."

Rowell said the groups represented at the conference felt they were not being listened to by the EPA.

"We, as citizens of Williamson county do not give our permission to be exposed to dioxins which will cause us illnesses we do not already have," Rowell said.

"With this study, we are saying that there is still a problem with dioxin exposure," Lynn Goldman, an assistant EPA administrator who helped direct the dioxin reassessment, told a news conference Tuesday. "And we are exploring what steps we should take in response."

Even among outspoken critics of dioxin emissions, proposals for possible new restrictions range widely. Greenpeace advocates a total ban on chlorine. The Sierra Club is urging a moratorium on incinerators. Other environmental groups favor severe restrictions on the use of chlorine by the pulp and paper industry.

Specialists are further divided over what the public should do to limit its exposure to dioxin. "The value of eating a balanced diet are greater than the risks of dioxin, so we do not recommend any changes in dietary habits," said Linda Birnbaum, a senior EPA researcher.

Breast feeding should also not be discouraged, she said.

Peter deFur, a dioxin specialist with the Environmental Defense Fund, recommends that people eat less fat as a hedge against exposure. "If dioxin is contained in fatty tissues, it would clearly be prudent to consume less of it," he said.

Before any official actions can be taken, however, the EPA must get a better fix on the sources of emissions, Murray said. Some 95 percent of known U.S. emissions stem from the combustion of waste, according to the EPA. "But they need to get better information about sources," Murray added.

EPA officials stress that the agency is unlikely to place further controls on dioxin emissions until next year. Although the study has been three years in the making, it must first go through a 120-day comment period and a peer-review process by EPA's advisory board.

and professional students at SIUC by the University Ombudsman's Office, a University service that serves to inform students of their rights in the institution, to be advisors for students with grievances.

Matthews said the SIUC Ombudsman has already agreed to train advisors if the resolution is passed tonight.

At the last GPSC meeting, some representatives were concerned that the resolution would subject potential advisors to liability since the word, "advocate" was used, Matthews said.

He said representatives thought "advocate" implied that advisors would speak on behalf of students before grievance review boards, much like a lawyer speaks for a client.

"There is little concern, however, that any liability exists within the resolution since the Ombudsman has already reviewed it and has agreed to work with us," Matthews said.

He said GPSC representatives have historically served as advisors for students filing grievances in the past, so the next logical step was for the council to create an official advisor program.

Hall said representatives that oppose the resolution based on liability are not considering the need of students involved in the grievance process.

"Those who say we can't do this because of liability are taking the wrong attitude," Hall said. "There are students that really need assistance."

Causes considered in air crash

Newsday

An engine suddenly in reverse. Unevenly applied air brakes. A loose engine. Each of those official theories, safety experts say, are unlikely as causes of last week's deadly USAir crash.

But then, so is an accident unlikely in which an airplane traveling at 221 mph is apparently thrown so suddenly out of control for no apparent reason that it drops 5,800 feet in just over 20 seconds and crashes with such force that it and the 132 people aboard virtually disintegrate.

So, unlikely or not, it is upon those three possible explanations that federal safety investigators are focused as they try to find out why Flight 427 out of Chicago never made it to Pittsburgh. Here's a look at each area:

-Inadvertent thrust reversal: Investigators in Pennsylvania have found physical evidence that the thrust reverser of the Boeing 737's right engine might have been partly deployed.

The evenly applied "speed brakes": These brakes, actually spoilers that passengers can see deploying from the top of the wing during flight and, particularly, just after landing, also are designed to help slow the aircraft.

Four—two on each wing—can be used in flight, two others are designed to be deployed only on the ground. Pilots can apply the brakes on one side and not the other if they wish.

-A loose right engine: Least likely to have caused this crash, say independent experts.

A loose engine would vibrate, could break fuel lines and certainly would not improperly but, in itself, it should not cause a pilot to lose control of the aircraft.

Vintage clothing, artwork store open

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Stonetree may sound like a tree made of petrified wood, but it is really the name of a new store in Carbondale.

Stonetree Designs, 100 E. Jackson, opened its doors last week to customers, but much of the artwork and jewelry sold there is already well known in the area. The store features fine hand-crafted, imported and vintage clothing and jewelry.

"We have a better selection and more unique items than other stores."

— Cristofe Chabot

Cristofe Chabot, co-owner of the store, said he and Sara Frers, an advisor in liberal arts, opened the store because they got tired of traveling to sell their work and wanted to make money.

"Being an artist, I wanted to have a store," Chabot said. "I also wanted to do more local things."

Chabot said the store is mainly selling jewelry now, but will expand soon and sell local art work such as photographs and sculpture pieces on consignment.

"We have limited space right now, but we will be expanding in the future," Chabot said.

Chabot said the first two days of business have been "a phenomenal success," because many people who had seen flyers that were handed out came in to the store.

Competition among artists can be strong, but Chabot said he thinks his business will be a success.

"We have a better selection and more unique items than other stores," Chabot said.

Chabot said the store also carries mineral specimens such as crystals and amethyst and a selection of vintage clothing. Tie-dyes and imported clothing will be sold in the future, he said.

Custom design work is one of the store's specialties and Chabot said people can bring in designs they would like to have crafted.

Chabot said he can do wire wrapping on the spot, but work such as silver smithing, lapidary, textile and bead work, must be done by him outside of the store.

Stonetree Designs will have a booth set up Thursday through Saturday at the Murphysboro Apple Festival.

Store hours are 12 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with some late hours on Friday and Saturday evenings.

C-SPAN school bus stops at SIUC

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

students, faculty and staff will get the opportunity to see C-SPAN's 22 ton rolling television production facility today.

The C-SPAN School Bus is on its second national tour, demonstrating the use of network public affairs programming in the classroom.

The 44,000 pound customized motorcoach is equipped with television cameras, computers, a laser printer and cellular telephones will be on display from 5 to 7 p.m. at the south entrance of the Communications Building.

Dr. John Simon, an SIUC history professor, said the bus is in this area because it will be used to broadcast the Lincoln-Douglass debate in Jonesboro. The debate will be Saturday and is the third of seven re-enacted debates between former president Abraham Lincoln and Steven Douglass.

Simon said C-SPAN wanted to display the educational bus at SIUC because they want to expose teachers and students to the advantages of teaching via video.

He said C-SPAN allows viewers to see the reasoning behind the statements.

"This is the wave of the future," Simon said. "C-SPAN is a powerful influence because unlike broadcast news they show the entire speeches of politicians and public officials."

Simon said this is the 15th anniversary of the network, and in the near future, networks like C-SPAN will not only be seen on cable, but in classrooms and in Morris Library.

"It won't be long before people are given a video to watch as homework," Simon said.

William Elliot, associate dean of the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts, said he is excited that C-SPAN is stopping at SIUC.

Elliot said the founder and CEO of C-SPAN, Brian Lamb, has been a long-time friend of the communications college at SIUC since its inception.

Lamb received an honorary doctoral degree from SIUC last spring in recognition of his contribution to the news industry.

Lamb will give a free public lecture about C-SPAN at 3 p.m. Friday in Lawson Hall 141.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Brown bag special: Students learn over lunch

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff Reporter

Thursday lunch hours can be spent learning to give full body massages as well as eating hamburgers, thanks to a new workshop series at the Student Center.

The Student Programming

Council has developed nine free workshops devoted to enhancing students' personal and professional lives in their new series, "Let's Do Lunch — Thursday's Special."

The first of the series is called, "Men and Women...Is There A Difference?" and will feature speakers Ata Karim and Anne Fischer, both interns at the Counseling Center in Woody Hall. Karim said this workshop will deal with communication differences between the genders, such as the differences in the ways they express emotions.

Karim said the workshop also will focus on ways to sharpen listening skills and will help people become better communicators.

Jeanne Leathers, director of the luncheon series, said the workshops should be informative and fun. People can bring their lunches, and relax as they participate in the workshops, she said.

"The workshops began last semester with the SPC series 'Wait Till You Hear This...' which ran for 7 weeks," she said. "If this series (Let's Do Lunch) does well, then next semester a lunch workshop will be held every week."

She said SPC is open to suggestions from students and faculty for future workshop themes.

The next workshop is called "Investing for Beginners," and Iqbal Mathur, professor of finance, will speak.

Leathers said the workshop is directed at students, who generally do not have a lot of extra money to begin an investment.

"This will be perfect for students who want to save up for winter or spring break," she said.

Leathers said another workshop, "Vitamins: Myth or Magic," will provide general information about vitamins and nutrition and will address issues pertaining specifically to the weight-lifting community as well.

The workshop "Seven Habits of Highly Successful People" will be about developing the necessary skills students need to have successful careers in today's job market, she said.

The workshops begin this Thursday in the Ohio River Room on the second floor of the Student Center from noon to 1 p.m.

Other workshops include, "Don't Get Bucked — Law Made Simple," "Travel Around the World for 50% off," "Full Body Massage" and "Forget about Forgetting."

All workshops will be held in the Ohio River Room, except "Vitamins: Myth or Magic," which will be held in the Kaskaskia Room, and "7 Habits of Highly Successful People," which will be located in the Missouri Room.

SIUC program helps smokers resist tobacco

By David Vingren
Staff Reporter

Tobacco users looking to "kick the habit" are sniffing out positive results by attending the SIUC Freedom From Smoking Program.

Graduate student Joe Baker, the program's coordinator for the past five years, said group support, along with self-study activities, are the key reasons he has witnessed immediate success among the majority of participants.

"My goal is just to help people quit," he said.

"We've been able to help a lot of people. We've helped students and staff. We've had people come who smoked anywhere from three years up to 40 years."

"My goal is just to help people quit (smoking.)"

—Joe Baker

Becky Skibinski, a 38-year-old graduate student, said the program worked for her.

"I had been smoking cigarettes for 20 years," Skibinski, who has not had a puff since last year's fall semester program concluded in November, said.

"I tried to quit on my own over and over, and I never did stop," she said.

"With these meetings, I had the support of a group, which helps."

Skibinski and others influenced to quit under the 10-year-old program periodically will be guests at the meetings.

Baker said an average of 12 to 15 people attend the full seven weeks each semester.

The group meets on Tuesdays from 4 to 6 p.m.

Yesterday's meeting in the Student Center's Mackinaw Room, run by SIUC Student Health Programs, was the first scheduled for this semester's session.

Users of all types of tobacco products, and all members of the community are welcomed.

still separate them.

He said he thinks the event will help draw out some SIUC students from India.

Correa said international students should consider University social events important because the events make the international student's experience different from those who attend school in their own country.

Alvin Chua, a senior in marketing from Singapore, said he does not like to see Americans treat international students like outsiders.

"Many of us have a sincere interest in the future of SIUC," he said.

Chua said college is a time in the lives of international students which will be long remembered.

Mario Diez, a senior in electrical engineering from Spain, was with American and international friends at a picnic this past Sunday. He said he doesn't have to work hard to find something fun to do in Carbondale.

"This is not unusual — for me to find friendly Americans who like to spend time with people from other countries," Diez said.

He said the American students he knows are similar in values and goals to students in Spain.

"Both Spanish and Latin American cultures are probably more open than Asian cultures, which is helpful for us," Diez said.

Keay Inn Tan, a senior in textiles and design from Malaysia, said for her the transition of coming to the United States was challenging.

"At first it is so hard to go out and talk to people because Americans talk about so many things (that) Asians keep to themselves," Tan said.

Tan said she sees people bridging the gaps between cultures while in college, and she thinks society will benefit from the relationships she sees building here.

Mark Rotich, a junior in pre-med from Kenya, said he appreciates aspects of America he doesn't find in his homeland.

"Americans in offices and stores everywhere greet you with this question, 'Can I help you?'" Rotich said.

He said polite, friendly Americans he has met in his church and in the community are an encouragement to him.

"Sometimes when you are not able to understand others when they speak or to be understood when you speak, you feel lower; you feel sad," Rotich said.

Wan Napi said he hopes international students know that activities like the upcoming international Olympics are being held for them.

Wan Napi said that he is open to hearing feedback and requests from all students, and that he is eager to work hard to make it possible for American and international students to interact.

"I consider myself a leader because I am a servant," Wan Napi said.

Clinton plans Haiti invasion

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON—The United States dispatched part of a force that could launch an invasion of Haiti as early as next week, while the Clinton administration scrambled to reverse public opinion against an invasion. Clinton decided to deliver a televised address Thursday evening, outlining plans to restore Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power. Although the administration has decided against seeking congressional approval before an invasion, public opinion polls showing as much as 73 percent opposition to an invasion are propelling a potentially embarrassing setback for the president on Capitol Hill.

Powlus' prowess: Notre Dame QB struts stuff

The Sporting News

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—The joke goes like this:

"How many Notre Dame players does it take to screw in a light bulb?"

"Just one. He holds it while the rest of the world revolves around."

This is the Irish mind set, especially when it comes to football. Notre Dame doesn't scratch its ear without NBC offering a Q-tip. It doesn't clear its throat without the appropriate audience of plaid-clad, shamrock-loving fans to hear the rumble. It is the Microsoft of college sports. Lumbering. Corporate. Uniquely powerful.

On occasion, though, you can burn through the Irish ozone and see something special. Something pure.

Saturday, in the tanning pit that was Notre Dame Stadium, you could see quarterback Ron Powlus make his home debut against Michigan and prove that maybe Beano Cook isn't so crazy after all. Maybe Powlus can earn two Heisman Trophies.

Notre Dame lost the game, 26-24, on a Boston College-like field goal in the final seconds, but it was hard to find fault with the sophomore from Berwick, Pa. Powlus completed 15 of 27 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns. They weren't Terry Dean numbers; but then again, this was Michigan, not New Mexico State or Kentucky.

The Wolverines blitzed Powlus nearly a dozen times. They sent cornerbacks. They sent linebackers. It was a wonder Michigan Coach Gary Moeller, who played linebacker at Ohio State for Woody Hayes, didn't run a stunt for himself and make a beeline for Powlus' thorax.

Michigan sacked Powlus six times and also made sure the quarterback paid for each of his 13 rushing attempts. Still, when it counted, when Powlus absolutely had to deliver, he did.

He found Lee Becton free in the end zone for a 1-yard scoring pass, but only after Powlus fooled the entire defense by peering toward another Notre Dame receiver. And with just 52 seconds left and Notre Dame trailing, 23-17, Powlus located wide receiver Derrick Mayes in the back of the end zone for the go-ahead touchdown. Mayes made a remarkable catch, but Powlus put the ball in the exact place where no Michigan defensive back could touch it.

"That Mayes kid ... whew," Wolverines linebacker Trevor Pryce said. "And that Powlus ... He's worth all the hype." Worth it, and better yet, unaffected by it. Nothing seems to bother him. Not the pressures of leading a program that expects nothing less than a national championship each season.

Eagles turn performance around against Bears

The Allentown Morning Call

PHILADELPHIA—If the Eagles keep playing on alternate weeks like this all season, they're going to have to install a revolving door on the team bandwagon. Their performance against the Chicago Bears Monday night couldn't have been more opposite of what the Eagles did in their season opener, as everything that was wrong suddenly was right in a 30-22 win over the Bears.

Last week, quarterback Randall Cunningham often couldn't locate his open receivers and just as often couldn't hit them when he did.

Monday night, he and wide receivers Calvin Williams and Fred Barnett picked up a bunch of Pro Bowl votes from fellow NFL players who were watching the game.

It was also the first time he had back-to-back 300-yard games, but there was absolutely no similarity between his performances last week and Monday night.

But he had a ton of support as the Eagles' ground game showed a few sparks of brilliance, the defense smothered the Bears' offense and the special teams helped out, too.

In fact, if there was anyone other than Cunningham who turned his season around Monday night it was punt returner Jeff Sydnor, who was the goat last week when he fumbled a punt away, setting up a New York Giants TD. Monday night he broke off a 47-yard punt return to set up the Eagles' third TD.

Limit on salary of pro players bad for sports

Los Angeles Times

Notes on a scorecard:

I used to think David Stern was hot stuff. ...

Now I think he is a menace to sports.

It was National Basketball Association Commissioner Stern who invented the salary cap. For this, he was hailed as a genius who was greatly responsible for the unprecedented success of pro basketball. Sorry, but Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson and Larry Bird deserved the credit.

Now the baseball owners think Stern's salary cap is the solution to whatever problems — real or imagined — they might have.

This is why the most ridiculous labor dispute in history — the billionaire owners vs. themselves and the millionaire ballplayers — is about to shut down the World Series. It has ruined a great season that was packed with record attempts and other exceptional performances by ballplayers who were on the brink of becoming the Jordans, Johnsons and Birds of their sport.

Meanwhile, a new salary cap is creating chaos in the National Football League. And there is talk of a strike or lockout in the National Hockey League. Why? A proposed salary cap.

This year's game of the century could be Penn State at Michigan Oct. 15. Wisconsin's chances to win a second consecutive Big Ten title are heightened by the Badgers not having to play Penn State.

I can just see the mythical national title coming down to Michigan (11-1) and Notre Dame (11-1) and Lou Holtz saying head-to-head meetings shouldn't be considered.

Allan Malamud writes for the Los Angeles Times wire service.

linebacker and rushman Tommy Anderson (5-10, 218). He is second on the team in tackles with 13 and leads the SIUC unit with two sacks.

"Tommy Anderson had a very good game on the defensive side of the ball, so that's two in a row for him," Watson said. "He just keeps improving each week and I think without a doubt, he is going to provide us with a lot leadership down the road."

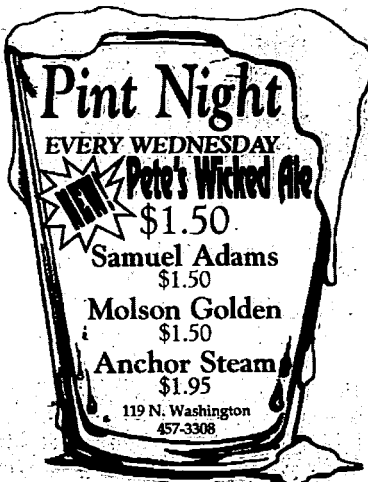

After a dismal performance against Tennessee-Martin, the Saluki defensive secondary stepped it up a notch at Ole Miss.

Leading the way is strong safety Darnell Hendricks (6-3, 205), who racked up a team-high nine tackles against the Rebels.

"We thought Darnell Hendricks had an exceptional game at safety and he continues to show he's a big-time football player in his own right," Watson said.

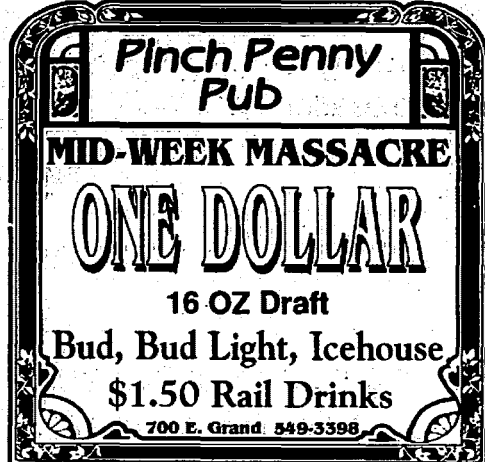

The SIUC defense has another shot at redemption Saturday at Arkansas State. The Indians racked up a 77-6 victory over the Dawgs in '94 on a rain-drenched turf in Houston.

Dawg defense striving to improve

Watson finds positive signs early in season

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

Finding bright spots in the Saluki football squads first two games may seem like an impossible task, but where there's a Watson, there's a way.

SIUC dropped its opener to Tennessee-Martin 35-26, and then took a beating from Ole Miss Saturday 59-3 to fall to 0-2 on the season.

"We're coming off what was a tough go for us down at Ole Miss, but there are some positive things we could derive from that trip, believe it or not," Saluki head coach Shawn Watson said. "That's just kind of my personality. We're going to find something positive."

And out of all the areas for Watson to be excited about, he chose an SIUC defensive unit that is yielding an average of 46.5 points per game.

At this stage in '93, the Saluki

Anderson

Baldwin

defense had given up 14 points to Division II Washburn and 49 in its trip to battle Division I Toledo (31.5 points per game).

The early season competition this fall is stiffer than last year, but Watson said his defensive standards will increase each week, including this Saturday against Division I Arkansas State.

"The expectation of our defense is growing with me and you might say 'hey, how can you say that after last week,'" he said. "But I'll tell you this, they (SIUC defense) have gotten better each week."

Our defense kept hammering last week and played with an attitude. I expect them to improve this week and I'll be disappointed if they don't play well."

Saluki junior linebacker Brian Tranchitella is off to another strong start, registering 17 tackles in his first two outings, one stop shy of his opening two-game total in '93.

Also making an impact on the defensive side of the ball is junior tackle Patrick Baldwin (6-0, 296), who Watson said had an exceptional game at Ole Miss.

"He (Baldwin) made several big plays and showed that he belongs," Watson said. "We saw the kid we recruited this past week and we're just looking for him now to continue to work to get better."

Backing the defensive front-four and flanking Tranchitella in the middle is sophomore outside linebacker and rushman Tommy

Fishing outing organized for local disabled people

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

A Carbondale man has pulled together the Southern Illinois region to give the area's developmentally disabled children and adults of the area a day for themselves.

Frank Bleyer has organized a fishing/picnic outing for mentally and physically disabled people in Carbondale and the surrounding communities on September 21, at his own lake.

The participants will be able to go fishing and enjoy a picnic lunch on a day devoted to them.

Bleyer said these outings started in May of 1988 and took about 45 special population people to his lake to fish. He has one of these outings semi-annually in the spring and fall.

"Some friends and I had the idea to take them fishing and it took off," he said.

Deborah Boston, one of many volunteers who has helped Bleyer over the years, said the outings are important to Bleyer.

"Back in 1988 he had a friend in a special education class, so he decided to take the class fishing and every year since then it has grown," she said.

Boston said the "Fish and Release" outing is for the developmentally disabled no matter what their age.

Bleyer said the outing had around 470 participants and he expects over 500 this year. Participants will be coming from special education classes in Murphysboro, Anna, Jonesboro, Carbondale, Marion, Du Quoin, Metropolis, Mounds and DeSoto as well as different workshops in the area.

He said fishing offers people experience they normally do not get.

"The day is educational for the participants allows them to be out in nature and meet new friends," Bleyer said.

While the main activity of the day is fishing, Boston said the outing brings people together and lets everyone feel good.

"Besides having fun fishing, the outing lets the participants be outside and enjoy the food and people," she said.

Boston also said it gives the participants a chance for them to have a day especially for them.

"They all get name tags and get recognized and treated the way they should be treated, with respect."

Boston said she missed the first fishing outing, but has attended everyone since because she likes the idea.

"I am friends with a lot of participants and this is a way I can help them," she said.

Bleyer said the community has really been greatly involved and allowed the fishing-picnic to grow to the size it is today.

There will be over 250 volunteers from the area to help. Boston said the more volunteers come out the more people can participate in the outing.

"We will be taking volunteers even on Sept. 21 because if we do not have enough volunteers we would have to cut back on the number of participants of future outings," she said.

The festivities begin at 9 a.m. at Frank Bleyer's Lake located 1.5 miles south of Midland Inn off Old Route 13 between Carbondale and Murphysboro.

MVC basketball nets TV package

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The Missouri Valley Conference basketball program will step into the cable television spotlight this season with 18 games slated to appear regionally and nationally.

MVC Commissioner Doug Elgin said Prime Network will televise 10 MVC games and ESPN and ESPN 2 will combine to televise eight conference games in the television package.

Assistant Commissioner for MVC Communications Jack Watkins said the television exposure means a lot to the league.

"By getting on television, the conference can propel the basketball teams, as well as our other MVC athletic programs, into homes throughout the country," he said. "Also, during the game we have a chance to air public service announcements about the universities in the MVC and other athletic programs we offer."

This is the best exposure we can get."

SIUC publicity promotion specialist Mike Trude said the television coverage of Saluki games helps with recruiting and enrollment.

"ESPN and Prime Network are two great windows for recruiting," he said. "Coaches can call their recruits and tell them to watch the games. This gives the prospective players a chance to take a closer look at the university."

Trude said the national television coverage not only helps in the recruiting process, but brings excitement to the university.

"I have been to televised games before and it is like Monday Night Football coming to campus," he said. "The students get caught up in the big time atmosphere of national television coverage. It is a circus like atmosphere."

Trude said the alumni get a kick out of the games as well.

"The alumni will gather in their homes around the country with their friends and watch the games," he said. "The alumni can then tell their friends all about Southern Illinois University, and the fun they had there."

Illinois State Redbird Invite gives SIUC softball practice

The SIUC softball team is already tuning up for spring after competing in the Illinois State Redbird Invitational this past weekend.

On Saturday, the Salukis dropped their first two games to Illinois Central and St. Xavier by scores of 6-4 and 4-1, respectively. SIUC then came back and beat host Illinois State 6-4, to keep from getting swept on the first day of the tournament.

SIUC came out of its slump on Sunday as the Salukis beat Bradley 9-8, and later went on to beat Northern Iowa 5-2. Sunday's wins brought the Salukis tournament record to 3-2, which was good enough to get them into the championship game against ISU.

The Salukis came up short against the Redbirds the second time around, losing 4-2, which was good enough for a second place spot in the tournament.
